Civic and Business Leader Daniel Wong Announces Candidacy for Fort Bend County Judge

SUGAR LAND, TX – On the same day that Democrat County Judge KP George appeared in court, former Sugar Land City Councilmember, business owner, and conservative activist Daniel Wong announced his candidacy for Fort Bend County Judge. Dr. Wong is focused on clearing out the chaos, corruption, and mismanagement that have plagued Fort Bend County for years under Democrat control.

“I am entering this race, because Fort Bend County needs real change,” said Wong. “County residents are tired of business as usual, and they deserve better. They deserve a county government that serves their needs, and not one that caters to insiders and politics as usual.”

Daniel Wong is a business leader, engineer, and man of faith who was born in the Portuguese colony of Macao and who immigrated to the U.S. with nothing but determination, and he found his home in Texas.

“I have such love for the people of Fort Bend County,” Wong added. “I have lived here for decades. It is a fantastic place to raise a family, start a business, and serve others. There is something special about the people of Fort Bend, and I believe passionately that our government can and should do better for all Fort Bend County residents.”

Wong is the founder and CEO of Tolunay Wong Engineers, a firm with over 400 employees and 13 offices statewide. A former Sugar Land City Councilmember and longtime Chairman of the Texas Board of Professional Engineers, Dr. Wong also serves on the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board through an appointment by Gov. Greg Abbott.

“This county has been burdened for too long by the politics of division. As County Judge, I will set a new standard, not just in the way the county conducts business, but also in the way it is seen by others. It’s time for a better Fort Bend and a brighter future for all,” Wong said.
